

P800657/WO/1

DaimlerChrysler AG

Abstract

The invention relates to a belt tensioning unit with a reversible clamping device which is controlled by a sensor system which is capable of recognizing potentially dangerous or accident-prone driving situations. In the event of danger, the belt is tensioned with sufficient force in order to draw the occupant into a desired sitting position prior to a possible collision or to retain said occupant in this position.